Champions are not necessarily the most talented. More often, they study the rules of the game and use it to their advantage.

- A pitcher must thoroughly understand the rules of the strike zone to pitch a perfect game.
- Quarterbacks must know every rule-based scenario to successfully manage the clock in a late fourth-quarter touchdown drive.
- Even star basketball players get benched early if they pile up too many fouls too early in the game.

Taxes are no different from sports. The goal of this month's seminar is to make sense of the hundreds of pages of congressional legalese of taxes. This will help position you to win and build wealth into retirement.
